Books & Bites—March Selection

Consider the Fork: A History of How We Cook and Eat by Bee Wilson

Since prehistory, humans have braved the business ends of knives, scrapers, and mashers, all in the name of creating something delicious—or at least edible. In Consider the Fork, award-winning food writer and historian Bee Wilson traces the ancient lineage of our modern culinary tools, revealing the startling history of objects we often take for granted. Charting the evolution of technologies from the knife and fork to the gas range and the sous-vide cooker, Wilson offers unprecedented insights into how we've prepared and consumed food over the centuries—and how those basic acts have changed our societies, our diets, and our very selves.

Books into Movies—March Selection

Pet Sematary by Stephen King

For most families, moving is a new beginning. But for the Creeds, it could be the beginning of the end. They've just moved next door to the Pet Sematary. It's a tiny patch of land that hides a mysterious Indian burial ground with the powers of resurrection. Kindly old Judd Crandall (Fred Gwynne), is the neighborhood nice guy who knows its secrets. He has seen enough to firmly believe that "sometimes dead is better." Master of the Macabre, Stephen King will take you and the Creeds on a violent race against time.
